As the board exams of Punjab School Education Board are inching closer, the Senior Secondary School for Meritorious Students, Ludhiana, is nowadays organising special counselling sessions for students with a sole motive to vanish their exam stress and to motivate them to get better academic results.

A one-to-one interaction with students is also being held to judge their level before the exam and to decide accordingly which student requires extra classes in which all subjects.

Principal of the school, Amarjit Singh, has been holding extra motivational classes for students in order to ensure that they prepare for the Board exams without any undue pressure.

“As many as 18 schoolteachers of our meritorious school are also pursuing a special online Oxford Teacher Training course from Oxford University. It is a three-month course and is about to conclude now. This course is helping teachers in learning new and scientific techniques and teachers are applying those techniques in their respective classes,” Singh said.

He further said he was also holding one-to-one session with students in order to judge their preparation before the Board examinations. “I have come across certain students who are although well in academics but they are feeling pressurised due to exams. I have been spending extra time with such students to de-stress them” Singh added.

Singh also said apart from taking daily feedback from the teachers about the academic performance of students, he was also discussing various teaching techniques require to be in place when the board exams are near. The principal said students have also been preparing for the competitive exams such as JET, NEET and Medical Nursing Service exam.
